

TOUCHING LIVES (Spring 2005)

A rural high school teacher from West China wrote to one of our volunteers:

"It's very nice of you to respond my letter so quickly. Receiving your letters from a far away place is really an enjoyable experience to an English learner, which I think will enrich my learning experience. I cherish these opportunities of learning and communication. In your letters, I learn how to express ourselves in a brief and direct way as well as your appreciation of life.

"Every time I will tell what you said to my daughter. She is curious about everything you mentioned. Last time, I also told the customs and stories of Thanksgiving Day. I think she can gradually understand how to show thanks to whoever has helped her." (an unedited email message)
